

EXOTIC ENGAGEMENT

© Michael Franz Whitby

She said:

"Take a look at me now...
...any regrets...
...from that beautiful mind, body and soul of yours"

The response never materialized

Where would one like to be, when past love pass eye sight from a short glimpse?
Is never the place and time of ones' choosing!

Passion remains timeless
For true love that did not work
And all those thoughts about together forever
Just say hello to some other day

Wishing you both could slip into something more...
...wishful thinking don't help
You know you never actually got over that relationship
You merely move on with your life

"Expressing yourself was one of your greatest gifts,
At this moment you seem lost for words,
Could that lost have something to do with me...
...really now...
...say something"

The response never materialized

"You had me from moment one,
And on moment two you let me slip away,
But here we stand again,
Me, finding love in an old familiar you,
Being able to see, maybe even touch,
And you remain wordless"

The response never materialized

"Take a look at me now,
And keep your eyes on me,
Say something... or else...
...in the next moment, I'll be gone"

The response arrived:

"The strength of our love still stands"
