

Alyscia Batista
Art show piece

Dear Mr.President,

Hi, this is Liam from the Bronx, New York. I know you're really busy with making America great again, so I have a few suggestions on some other stuff you should add to your list. Even though I'm only in 5th grade, I can promise you that I am the smartest in my class so you won't regret listening to my advice. First of all, did you know that the earth is getting hotter and hotter every year? Every book I've read calls it global warming and no matter how cool the summer is, I know this is not a good thing. Everyone says that with global warming happening, that New York City might disappear soon and that means your house would be gone too! I was also thinking about the polar bears that live in Antarctica. What if they lose their homes too? As you can see, this is a very big problem. Luckily, I have come up with a plan to fix this. Well since America is super rich I thought that we could hire a bunch of scientists to work together to come up with a freezer gun. It's kind of opposite of a heat gun, but instead of a laser shooting out it would be a really cold substance that could freeze anything, something like liquid nitrogen (I'll leave the details up to the scientists). So we could make a thousand of these freezer guns and put them all around Antarctica and the North Pole. They would constantly be making more ice which would mean that the polar bears and penguins wouldn't lose their homes. And we could then use the freezer guns to help us in New York if we see too much ice melting here too. We might also be able to make more snow days! I have also considered that fact that this could be very expensive so I am willing to sell all of my comics to help raise money for the greater good of our planet. We could probably also sell a bunch of the weapons we own that we aren't using. I hope you consider my idea and don't worry about giving me credit, I'll be happy with knowing that our homes aren't going to be submerged any time soon.

Yours truly, a concerned citizen

Dear Liam,

Thank you for writing a letter to the president of the United States regarding your concern on global warming. As you may already realize, the president is very busy working on making America great so he was not able to respond personally to your message. However, we would like to inform you that we take global warming very very seriously and have been putting our foremost attention to this problem.

We would also like to bring light to the fact that much of what you read about global warming is exaggerated and that the scientists at the White House can assure you that the United States of America has been observing this trend for many many years. We have been able to conclude that there is nothing out of the ordinary that we need to be alarmed about. Thank you for your concern and do not hesitate if you have any more questions regarding global warming.

With kind regards,
The White House administration

